What makes a good battery enclosure?

When designing a custom battery pack plastic enclosure, the most important aspects are: it must be able to support the battery itself and pass rigorous tests, especially when associated with transportation safety certifications.

How much does a battery enclosure weigh?

To meet overall weight requirements, the weight goal for the battery enclosure was only 15 kilograms. The aluminum enclosure weighed 64 kilograms. "It's quite a reduction in weight, which then really pushed us towards the composite materials as opposed to aluminum or other metals," Dugmore says.

What are battery enclosures made of?

Battery enclosures are typically made of sheet metal or other conductive materials. The outer part of a battery is made of metal, isolating the interior from EMP damage. Furthermore, the interior of a battery has no circuitry that can be damaged by EMP.
