Ecuador's government has recently committed to the Ecological Transition through which it aims to reach carbon neutrality by 2050, and for this, fossil fuel base generation will need to be displaced. Although hydropower generation helped diversify Ecuador's electricity matrix, the country remains.

In 2024, Ecuador's generation capacity was 9,255 megawatts (MW), of which 5,686 MW (61 percent) was renewable energy sources, and 3,569 MW (39 percent) was non-renewable energy sources (fossil fuels derived from oil and natural gas). Ecuador's renewable energy is comprised of hydro power (5,419.

Ecuador will receive $1 billion from foreign companies to build new solar power plants and battery storage by 2026. This news comes directly from Ecuador's government after the country suffered long blackouts in 2023 and 2024. Those blackouts happened because Ecuador relies too much on hydropower.

There is a lack of subsidies, tax incentives, or loan programs that could stimulate market interest. This insufficient support hampers the scale-up of the industry. Ecuador's electricity prices are relatively low compared to other South American countries. As a result, many households prefer to.
