Demand for solar-powered home systems has increased rapidly in the last several years. With that demand comes fierce competition within the solar panel market. Scams, schemes and straight-up fraud abound in the dark underbelly of an otherwise light-filled industry. While there are still many honest.

While reputable companies can help you save money with clean or solar energy improvements, scammers offer more than they can deliver. The scams vary, but here's the gist: someone claiming to be with the government or your utility company promises big savings on your utility bills from solar energy.

We're sharing some common solar scams for you to be aware of and tips for avoiding them. (Pro tip: you can use EnergySage to take advantage of the research we've already done for you to know you have a trusted installer on your side!) This article is intended to provide an informational overview of.

While the best solar panels can offer significant benefits, including reduced energy costs and a smaller carbon footprint, the growing industry has unfortunately attracted its share of scammers and unethical companies. These bad actors prey on homeowners' lack of knowledge about solar technology. What is a solar energy scam?

The scams vary, but here's the gist: someone claiming to be with the government or your utility company promises big savings on your utility bills from solar energy or other home improvements designed to increase energy efficiency. If you agree to the scammer's offer, it could cost you tens of thousands of dollars.

How do I know if a solar company is a scam?

Be wary of solicitors. Always verify the identity and credentials of anyone claiming to represent a solar company. Unscrupulous solar companies may employ aggressive or dishonest sales tactics to close deals quickly, especially if the proposed solar installation isn't in your best interest.

Should you act immediately on a solar energy deal?

Don't succumb to high-pressure tactics. Clean energy scammers often claim to offer a special deal — if you act right now. If you feel pressured to act immediately on a solar or other renewable energy deal, just say no, advises Melanie McGovern, spokesperson for the Better Business Bureau.

How do I know if solar energy is right for me?

Legitimate providers will work with you to figure out whether solar energy is right for you. Check out the Department of Treasury's guidance on clean energy. Take your time. If someone is rushing you to sign a contract, or insists you sign an agreement on an electronic tablet without showing you the full agreement, stop.
