Overview

Energy policy in Ecuador is driven by its need for energy security as well as its conservation efforts. Despite past and ongoing attempts to take charge in (as with the now defunct), oil production and exportation still supports its small $5,853 GDP/capita economy at an average of 549,000 barrels/day in 2016. The push and pull between energy independence/nationalism and appeasement of conservationist.

What is Ecuador's energy policy?

Energy policy in Ecuador is driven by its need for energy security as a developing country as well as its conservation efforts.

How much energy does Ecuador use?

In 2021, the country consumed 21 thousand short tons,15 which it imported primarily from the United States, followed by Peru. Ecuador relied heavily on fossil fuel (which include oil, natural gas, and coal) production for power generation a decade ago, with fossil fuel-powered plants accounting for about 43% of total energy production in 2011.

Does Ecuador have a natural gas market?

Ecuador's natural gas market is less developed than its oil sector; it has a 0.9% share of total energy production and 1.7% share of energy consumption (Figure 1). Natural gas in Ecuador is mostly used by the industry sector¹.

Does Ecuador rely on hydropower?

Ecuador's reliance on hydropower for electricity generation makes the country's power sector vulnerable to droughts and low water levels during the dry season, which generally runs from October to March each year. To compensate, Ecuador currently relies on oil-fired plants for non-hydroelectric power generation.

Who uses natural gas in Ecuador?

Natural gas in Ecuador is mostly used by the industry sector¹. Hydropower in Ecuador is a significant source of electricity generation given the country's geographical features, such as the Andes Mountains and the Amazon rainforest. Hydropower accounted for 79.1% of total electricity generation in 2021, up from 55.4% in 2011.² Figure 1.

What is energy sovereignty in Ecuador?

Ecuador's 20th constitution (established in 2008) mentions multiple forms of sovereignty, including energy sovereignty. Self-sufficiency is one of the pillars of energy sovereignty as discussed by former President Rafael Correa's administration. The administration called for the following objectives:
